New citation style in AY20/21: APA 7th

The APA 6th edition (the one you've been using for your assignment in the past) has been around for 10 years. In October 2019, the 6th edition is retired as the new 7th edition is published!

The new APA 7th edition is updated with best practices in scholarly writing and publishing, It includes new student resources, student paper samples, and more reference type examples.

In AY2020-2021, you will be using the APA 7th edition citation style for your assignments.

Let's see what are the major changes and what resources are available!

In addition to MS Word & Excel, we are excited to show you another great (and free) tool for designing!

Canva is an online tool that has a vast amount of free icons, images, and templates you can use to create a poster, an Instagram icon, or any image you need.
(This newsletter you're reading is made entirely with Canva!) We highly encourage any non-designer or anyone looking for an easy-to-use designing tool to join us in the Canva workshop on July 30.
